Gender and Migration in 21st Century Europe Providing interdisciplinary and empirically grounded insights into the issues surrounding gender and migration and into and within Europe, this work presents a comprehensive and coherent overview of the historical, legal, policy and cultural framework underpinning different types of European migration. Analysing the impact of migration on women's careers, the impact of migration on family life and gender perspectives on forced migration, the authors also examine the consequences of EU enlargement for women's migration opportunities and practices, as well as the impact of new regulatory mechanisms at EU level in addressing issues of forced migration and cross-national family breakdown. Recent interdisciplinary research also offers a new insight into the issue of skilled migration and the gendering of previously male-dominated sectors of the labour market.

International Population Conference Unemployment levels are on the rise nearly everywhere, and the rate is particularly high among young people. If this trend is not reversed, the potential long-term economic and social damage is incalculable. For this reason a particular urgency attended an international conference on the subject held in March 2009 at the Marco Biagi Foundation in Modena, Italy, in the course of which specialists in labour law, human resources management, labour economics, sociology, education, and statistics met to present and compare research. This issue of the Bulletin of Comparative Labour Relations includes a selection of the papers presented at that conference. Although the selected essays present findings on specific issues in particular countries, the general applicability at the global level is evident. Assessing measures taken to deal with youth unemployment in thirteen countries (Italy, Spain, Russia, Sweden, Bulgaria, Estonia, Hungary, Poland, Israel, Nigeria, the United States, China, and Singapore), twenty-five leading authorities describe and analyse such aspects of the problem as the following: vocational education and training; quality of employment as well as quantity; links between educational institutions and local, national and international enterprises; consultation and co-operation between employers’ associations and trade unions; job security vs. employment security; funding for postgraduate programmes, internships, and on-the-job vocational training; career development for future managers; safeguards for workers in a framework of flexibility; labour market pressure from unskilled immigrant workers; 'learn-as-you-learn' schemes; work in the informal economy; and the rationale behind the phasing out of passive labour market measures for school leavers such as unemployment benefits.

Labour Productivity, Investment in Human Capital and Youth Employment L’Africa è spesso descritta come il continente più mobile al mondo, ma da quali circolazioni migratorie si sta esattamente parlando? La convinzione che nel prossimo futuro una parte consistente della popolazione africana si riverserà in Europa ha un qualche fondamento concreto? Rispondere a queste domande è meno facile di quanto si potrebbe pensare. Disagio mentale, capitale sociale, reti familiari, rimesse e sviluppo, lavoro minorile, urbanizzazione e politiche migratorie sono alcuni dei concetti chiamati in causa. Un percorso dal Sahel alla Somalia, dal Bénin all’Uganda sino al Sud-Africa che vanta la capacità di collocare l’analisi della migrazione nel tessuto quotidiano delle società africane e di restituire il’esperienza concreta di donne e uomini a vario titolo coinvolti nell’avventura migratoria.

Museums, Migration and Identity in Europe This book represents one of the outcomes of the World Complexity Science Academy (WCSA) Conference held in Rome in the Autumn of 2018, titled “Turbulent Convergence”. It reflects the fruitful discussions developed by a number of papers presented at the event by scholars from several different countries. In particular, the volume represents a great effort on the part of the WCSA research carried out in Europe and beyond and to provide a forum for valuable discussion at international level in a cosmopolitan way.

The Oxford Handbook of Ethnicity, Crime, and Immigration This book provides an indispensable voice in the scholarly conversation on migration. It shows how migration has shaped and has been shaped by the three Abrahamic religions - Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No theory of migration will be complete unless the theological insights of these religions are taken into account.

Mussolini’s Cities

Koinè This book provides a concise and innovative history of Italian migration to Australia over the past 150 years. It focuses on crucial aspects of the migratory experience, including work and socio-economic mobility, disorientation and reorientation, gender and sexual identities, racism, sexism, family life, aged care, language, religion, politics, and ethnic media. The history of Italians in Australia is re-framed through key theoretical concepts, including transculturalism, transnationalism, decoloniality, and decolonial intersectionality. This book challenges common assumptions about the Italian-Australian on how they are impacted by migration, and in turn how migration impacts the host society. It also presents a much-needed, fresh look at the role of religion and ethnicity in Italian-Australian migration.

Un posto nel mondo. Donne e migranti e pratiche di scrittura This work provides an insightful and original analysis of the work of women writers, focusing on the role of migration in their lives and their writing. The title, “Surrounded by Water”, recalls the identity of a land whose coastlines and surrounding seas have symbolically represented social, economic, political, cultural bridges or walls, meeting point or barrier, in many different ways. The book provides a case study of migration from Italy to Australia, where the experiences of women writers are shared and analyzed, with insights related to the migration experience and the role of literature in it. The authors have tried to highlight the complex relationship between migration and literature, and to provide a new perspective on the role of women writers in shaping their own identity and the identity of their host country.

The Biology of Numbers The book analyzes the role of dual nationality in different fields of the law, in particular national and EU law, and offers a convincing argument for the (minimum) harmonization of European laws by providing a concise analysis of the various aspects of the problem as the following: the legal status of dual nationality in different countries, the implications of dual nationality for individual rights and responsibilities, and the role of the EU in shaping the future of dual nationality law.

The Geography of Religion This book provides a comprehensive and interdisciplinary analysis of the role of religion in contemporary society, focusing on the geographical aspects of religion and its impact on the society. It analyses the role of religion in different cultural regions, including Catholicism in Latin America, Islam in the Middle East, and Hinduism in South Asia, and how religious beliefs and practices are shaped by their geographical environment. The book also discusses the role of religion in shaping the society, including its impact on political and economic systems, and its role in shaping the identity of the society.

The Cultural Dimension of Migration This book provides a comprehensive and multidisciplinary analysis of the role of culture in shaping the migration experience, focusing on the cultural aspects of migration and its impact on the society. It analyses the role of culture in different cultural regions, including the role of culture in shaping the identity of the society, and how cultural beliefs and practices are shaped by their geographical environment. The book also discusses the role of culture in shaping the society, including its impact on political and economic systems, and its role in shaping the identity of the society.

The Oxford Handbook of Migration and Theology This report focuses on the local level integration of migrants in Rome, and provides information on the national framework for integration in Italy. It thereby delivers an important contribution to the understanding of the durability and contextuality of recent European south-north migration and their consequences for European policies. This volume compiles recent research results on European south-north migration, addressing migration processes and practices, the management of migratory moves by institutional frameworks and relevant public discourse. It thereby delivers an important contribution to the understanding of the durability and contextuality of recent European south-north migration and their consequences for European policies.

The History of Migration in Europe

Mezzogiorno E Migrazioni Interne Migration represents one of the key issues in both Italian and European politics, and it has triggered EU-wide debates and negotiations, alongside alarmist and often sensationalist news reporting on the activities of government, party and social movement actors. The Politics of Migration in Italy explores what happens when previously undisputed issues become central to political agendas and are publicly debated in the mass media. Examining how political actors engage with the issue of migration in electoral campaigning, this book highlights how complex policy issues are addressed selectively by political entrepreneurs and how the responses of political actors are influenced by strategic incentives and ongoing events. This book studies the dynamics of the politicization of the immigration issue across three local contexts in Italy - Prato, Milan and Rome - which differ systematically with respect to crucial economic, cultural and security dimensions of immigration. Offering an innovative exploration of party competition and migration in Italy, as well as providing the conceptual and analytical tools to understand how these dynamics play out beyond the Italian case, this book is essential reading for students, scholars and policymakers working in the areas of migration studies, agenda-setting and European politics more generally.

Migration, Mobility and Human Rights at the Eastern Border of the European Union

Cities and Labour Immigration Argues that concern with the nation and national community will be a key factor in redefining twenty-first-century politics. Bringing the Nation Back In takes as its starting point a series of developments that shaped politics in the United States and Europe over the past thirty years: the end of the Cold War, the rise of financial and economic globalization, the creation of the European Union, and the development of the postnational. This book contends we are now witnessing a break with the post-1945 world order and with modern politics. Two competing ideas have arisen—global cosmopolitanism and populist nationalism. Contributors argue this polarization of social ethos between cosmopolitanism and nationalism is a sign of a deeper political crisis, which they explore from different perspectives. Rather than taking sides, the aim is to diagnose the origins of the current impasse and to "bring the nation back in" by expanding what we mean by "nation" and national identity and by respecting the localizing processes that have led to national traditions and struggles. Mark Luccarelli is Associate Professor of American Studies at the University of Oslo, Norway. His books include The Eclipse of Urbanism and the Greening of Public Space: Image Making and the Search for a Commons in the United States, 1682-1865. Rosario Forlenza is Fellow at the Remarque Institute at New York University. He is the author of On the Edge of Democracy: Italy, 1943-1948. Steven Colatrella is Adjunct Professor of International Political Theory at the University of Padua, Italy, and Adjunct Professor of Government and Sociology at the University of Maryland University College. He is the author of Workers of the World: African and Asian Migrants in Italy in the 1990s.

The Politics of Migration in Italy Is 21st-century Rome a global city? Is it part of Europe's core or periphery? This volume examines the "real city" beyond Rome's historical center, exploring the diversity and challenges of life in neighborhoods affected by immigration, neoliberalism, formal urban planning, and grassroots social movements. The contributors engage with themes of contemporary urban studies—the global city, the self-made city, alternative modernities, capital cities and nations, urban change from below, and sustainability. Global Rome serves as a provocative introduction to the Eternal City and makes an original contribution to interdisciplinary scholarship.

Digitalization, Economic Development and Social Equality With a diverse list of contributors, this volume seeks to discuss in depth some of the key issues that migration poses to World Christianity in the fields of constructive theology, ethics, spirituality, mission, ministry, inculturation, interreligious dialogue, and theological education.

Italy in the Modern World Foreword The modern developments in mathematical biology took place roughly between 1920 and 1940, a period now referred to as the "Golden Age of Theoretical Biology". The eminent Italian mathematician Vito Volterra played a decisive and widely acknowledged role in these developments. Volterra's interest in the application of mathematics to the non physical sciences, and to biology and economics in particular, dates back to the turn of the century and was expressed in his inaugural address at the University of Rome for the academic year 1900/01 (VOLTERRA 1901). Nevertheless, it was only in the mid-twenties that Volterra entered the field in person, at the instigation of his son in law, Umberto D'Ancona, who had confronted him with the problem of competition among animal species, asking him whether a mathematical treatment was possible. From that time on, until his death in 1940, Volterra produced a huge output of publications on the subject. Volterra's specific project was to transfer the model and the concepts of classical mechanics to biology, constructing a sort of "rational mechanics" and an "analytic mechanics" of biological associations. The new subject was thus to be equipped with a solid experimental or at least empirical basis, also in this case following the tried and tested example of mathematical physics. Although very few specific features of this reductionist programme have actually survived, Volterra's contribution was decisive, as is now universally acknowledged, in encouraging fresh studies in the field of mathematical biology.
